ABOUT ME

A curious and systems-oriented Computer Science graduate, aspiring Web3-first developer passionate about low-level architecture, decentralized technologies, and the philosophical craft of building purposeful, future-facing software.

PERSONAL STATEMENT

> Whoami

I am a BSc Computer Science graduate from KIIT University with a strong philosophical and technical curiosity about how technology shapes the world. My academic journey has been deeply rooted in core programming concepts, modern technologies like AI and cloud computing, and an emerging passion for low-level systems and decentralized technologies.

I aspire to become a Web3-first and systems-oriented developer, contributing to the foundations of a more open, resilient, and equitable digital future. For me, computer science is not just about building software—it is about understanding systems deeply and using that understanding to empower individuals and communities through better tools, protocols, and platforms.

Beyond code, I'm passionate about literature and philosophy, particularly the works of Shakespeare, Nietzsche, Orwell, and Huxley, which continuously shape how I think about technology, ethics, and human agency. I see programming as both a science and a philosophy—a way to participate in what may become the greatest human masterpiece in history.

This remains one of the achievements I am most proud of.

- I received an Honorable Mention at the 2018 Zambia Model United Nations conference for notable debating skills, clear effort, and upholding a positive attitude. This was my first individual recognition for debating after a year of dedicated participation in internal school debate competitions, many of which my team won. More importantly, the experience provided an immersive lesson in diplomacy, shaping my understanding and perception of geopolitics.
- [06/10/2023] Certificate of Participation Awarding institution: KIIT University
- I was awarded a Certificate of Participation for representing Iceland in the NATO Council at the 2023 KIIT Model United Nations conference—my first experience as a delegate in a closed UN council. Over three days, I passionately and diligently defended my country's stance, ultimately earning my second Honorable Mention at an MUN conference, though no separate certificate was issued for this recognition.
- The experience was profoundly enlightening, with the highlight being a post-council one-on-one discussion with our experienced chairs. Prior to this, they had publicly congratulated me for delivering the best speeches in the council, which was an incredibly uplifting moment. However, during our private discussion, they advised me to refine my lobbying and negotiation skills, emphasizing that diplomacy is about compromise and strategic alliances—an invaluable lesson I intend to apply in my future UN council engagements.
